ABSTRACT

The University of Houston-Clear Lake (UHCL) reports on the growth and landmark achievements that made the year 2000 very important for the University. The remote connections the University works to foster, including distance education offerings, and the local efforts that include extensive recruiting and flexible class schedules generated a record-setting fall enrollment in year 2000 of 7,580 with gains reported in all four of the university's schools. Minority students have made a major impact on the school's enrollment profile, reaching 2,076 in the fall of 2000. UHCL reports that its fastest growing academic programs are in computer-related fields. Two new degree programs were implemented in 2000, a master of science in systems engineering and a bachelor of social work, and among its notable programs, the UHCL describes its Success through Education Program which prepares teachers in collaboration with local school districts. UHCL complements such efforts with global partnerships that accelerate the exchange of learning and foster worldwide communication and understanding. The report also contains information about research grants and financial support through contributions to the President's Cabinet and other giving-level groups. An honor role of contributors is included with information about donations and UHCL expenditures. (SLD)

University of Houston-Clear Lake assumed a prominent position on the academic scene during 2000, reporting remarkable growth and landmark achievements that continue to make it the university of choice for upper-level education. UH-Clear Lake broadens the boundaries of the community, and is increasingly recognized as an international university. It pursues dynamic partnerships and outreach efforts that are as relevant around the corner as they are around the globe. The university's success reflects its capacity to share and support a diverse range of perspectives — on a local and an international scale.

UHCL enjoys the best of many worlds, and creates opportunities to expand its connections with those worlds. Recognizing that significant increases in the university's minority and international student populations can serve as a catalyst for worldwide change, the university embraces the challenge of unlimited possibilities. UHCL strategically combines greater course selections with technologically enriched learning modes, to provide students a seamless educational environment, whether they live along the Gulf Coast or in Sri Lanka.

Committed to strengthening socially relevant research, UHCL drives science, technology and economic development. In addition to government grants, the generosity of our corporate, foundation and private philanthropic donors makes it possible for us to continue addressing societal issues that can have a profound impact on our lives.

We have made enormous progress in building a sense of community and shared purpose at UHCL. We must continue to strengthen the core curriculum, sustain technical literacy, support research, and revitalize our commitment to diversity and internationalism. UHCL advances the well-being of our community, state, nation and the globe, and I look forward to expanding our efforts with your unwavering support.

William A. Staples

William A. Staples
President

UHCL has its eye on the future helping students realize the world is multifaceted when seen from different perspectives. The university's leadership team — President William A. Staples (c), Senior Vice President and Provost Edward J. Hayes (l) and Vice President for Administration and Finance Michelle Dotter (r) — fosters the best possible educational environment for UHCL students, faculty and staff, ensuring its status as one of the nation's top upper-level universities.

Academic and community partnerships keep UHCL in the forefront of higher learning through innovative educational programs. Charles McKay (c), dean of the School of Natural and Applied Sciences, and aerospace community leader Bob Minor (r) guided the development of a new master of science in systems engineering program to meet the needs of graduate students like Jonette Stecklein (l) with existing careers in the aerospace industry.

UH-Clear Lake's proactive approach to higher learning relies on a combination of interrelated perspectives. The university's efforts toward building a worldwide network of educational programs and partnerships begin at the local level and radiate beyond regional, national and international boundaries. UHCL's broad agenda of initiatives flourishes in an atmosphere unobstructed by geographical limits. And, the further the university travels, the closer it gets to home, as distant connections serve to enrich UHCL's programs in a mutually perpetuating cycle.

Those remote connections, combined with domestic efforts that include intensive recruiting, flexible class schedules and a growing menu of distance-learning options, generated a record-setting fall 2000 enrollment of 7,580, a 6.55 percent increase over fall 1999. All four of the university's schools — Business and Public Administration, Education, Human Sciences and Humanities, and Natural and Applied Sciences — reported enrollment gains.

UHCL's enrollment is changing rapidly, and international and minority students represent the fastest growing segments. The increasing popularity of borderless education is evident as international enrollment mushroomed by 21 percent to 611 international students in fall 2000 from 504 in fall 1999.

Minority students have made a major impact on the school's enrollment profile, increasing from 1,908 in fall 1999 to 2,076 in fall 2000. Hispanic enrollment surged 12 percent over last year, and Asian and African American figures increased by 8 and 6 percent, respectively.

UHCL maintains its stellar image in a rapidly evolving academic climate with an enlightened faculty and staff assembled from all parts of the globe. Students acquire a comprehensive education as they reap the benefits of learning from such a diverse and knowledgeable group of individuals.

The education evolution has embraced technology and, not surprisingly, UHCL's fastest growing academic programs are in computer-related fields. School-to-career programs, designed to prepare students for specific roles in the public and private sectors, include computer science, computer information systems and management information systems.

As UHCL broadens its perspective from community to global, the success of the university's vision rests on the development of fresh ideas and continued exploration, to create a universal network of dynamic partnerships among universities, community organizations and businesses.

on the horizon

UHCL opens new doors to the global community for students like Margaret Ayot (r), broadening the scope of each student's educational experience through exposure to the world's rich and diverse cultures. William T. Cummings, dean of the School of Business and Public Administration (front, seated), Jan Reinhartsen (l), president of the Clear Lake Area Economic Development Foundation, and Jerry Rhodeback, UHCL executive director for international initiatives, take an active role in mapping out global initiatives.

UHCL reinforces its strong local presence by actively promoting programs and curricular experiences that involve area school districts, corporations and surrounding communities. A newly established partnership with the Clear Lake Area Economic Development Foundation provides greater opportunities for UHCL students to explore world industry markets including aerospace, petrochemical, high-technology, communications, biomedical technology and tourism.

UHCL implemented two new degree programs during 2000 — a master of science in systems engineering and a bachelor of social work. The university also introduced concentrations in space and exploration and in professional writing/applied graphic design in its graduate humanities program.

Future educators participate in the Success Through Education Program (STEP), a highly successful teacher preparation collaboration with community colleges and local school districts. Houston Endowment Inc. has established a $1.5 million challenge grant that will increase to $3 million with matching funds, enabling UHCL to bolster the STEP philosophy throughout the university.

Through distance education technology, the university extends its influence to regional and state levels. UHCL offers a variety of online, compressed video and remote instructional television courses, and plans to implement online master's degree programs in instructional technology, software engineering and healthcare administration.

Recognizing that unlimited exposure is essential to a comprehensive academic experience, UHCL facilitates global partnerships through educational exchanges, cultural immersions and infrastructure development projects. Student ambassadors enjoy a borderless education, as they immerse themselves in world cultural centers as stimulating and far ranging as Bangladesh, Japan, The Netherlands, Sri Lanka, Mexico and Brazil.

UHCL sets a precedent for breaking down barriers with its landmark negotiations in Vietnam. Agreements for undergraduate and graduate transfer programs at Vietnam National University-Ho Chi Minh City have been finalized, and discussions are under way with Hanoi University of Technology to develop a similar partnership. In India, UHCL played an instrumental role in the recent establishment of Lake College of Computer Science and Management in Chennai. Future plans include the development of a college in Bangalore, duplicating the Lake College concept.

Lou White, professor of management, maintains a strong link with National Sun Yat-Sen University in Taiwan, where he performs comparative research on organizational development ethics. Sandria Hu and Nick de Vries, both professors of fine arts, orchestrated a trilateral agreement among UHCL, Mexico's Universidad Veracruzana and the Academy of Fine Arts and Design in Bratislava, which sent graduate fine arts student Luis Trevino to Xalapa, Veracruz for a semester.

UHCL is a catalyst for partnerships that accelerate the exchange of learning, research and technologies, as they simultaneously foster greater communication and understanding worldwide.

on the edge

The foundation of any university is its faculty and staff. Top UHCL presidential honors in 2000 were presented to (l to r) Resa Ott, community relations coordinator, Cindy Howard, associate professor of biology and environmental science, Nick de Vries, professor of fine arts, and Ramiro Sanchez, associate professor of chemistry.

Since 1998, public and private sector research grants have tripled to $11,786,788, permitting faculty-student partnerships to pursue significant laboratory research and fieldwork studies. More than 75 of the university's eminent faculty are conducting original research that addresses universal topics including family behavior, environmental issues, classroom technology and fine arts.

Cindy Howard, associate professor of biology and environmental sciences, conducts ecological assessments of Patrick Bayou, along the Houston Ship Channel. With a $31,504 grant from Equilon Enterprises, Howard purchased field equipment to perform geographic functions.

Sandria Hu, professor of fine arts, was awarded a $4,500 grant from the Cultural Arts Council of Houston/Harris County for the Texas Art Education Association/Visual Art Scholastic Event (TAE/VASE). Annually, TAE/VASE sponsors a statewide fine arts competition for high school students.

Atsusi Hirumi, associate professor of instructional technology, received a $30,514 grant, a subcontract from University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, for his efforts to integrate higher learning with technology through distance education.

Lawrence T. Kajs, assistant professor of educational leadership, received a three-year, $1,038,228 U.S. Department of Education grant to design a technology-based mentoring model for use by teachers throughout the country.

David Malin, professor of psychology and neuroscience, in collaboration with Minneapolis Medical Research Foundation and Nabi, a biological products company, continues to garner national attention with vaccine testing as a treatment for nicotine addiction.

Ramiro Sanchez, associate professor of chemistry, was awarded a patent for a chemical process that could be used to remove nitrogen oxides from the environment and safely convert them to benign forms. The first patent issued for research performed solely at UHCL, it may eventually impact pollution-reduction measures worldwide.

UHCL's Center for Economic Development and Research, Environmental Institute of Houston and Mid-Continent Technology Transfer Center conduct ongoing dialogues with local organizations, business and industry to promote mutually beneficial research.

Public and private sector grants ensure a viable research program by maintaining outstanding professors, state-of-the-art facilities and wide-ranging student opportunities, which combine to build the underlying framework for success in higher education.

Business and community leaders and area philanthropists converge in the President's Cabinet, working to enhance and strengthen UHCL's role in the 21st century. Recipients of the prestigious 2000 President's Cabinet Leadership Award include (l to r) alumni Kippy Payne Caraway, Kathy Reeves and Micheal Reeves, and Michael Landolt and Ann Wismer Landolt.

Vision. Dedication. Commitment. Integrity. Desire. These attributes are often associated with successful leadership and are qualities vital to philanthropy. The President's Cabinet is where leaders and philanthropists converge to enhance and strengthen UHCL's foundation for future generations of leaders. A distinguished giving level, the President's Cabinet recognizes individuals who lend their time, talent and resources on behalf of the university and its endeavors. The program, established in 1999, honors individuals who make contributions of $1,000 or more during the designated calendar year.

The President's Cabinet comprises UHCL friends, alumni, faculty and business and community leaders who are invited by the president to assist with special projects and initiatives. Each year, individuals who distinguish themselves as visionaries committed to UHCL's mission of excellence are recognized with the prestigious UHCL President's Cabinet Leadership Award.

Goals for the President's Cabinet include doubling the size of the group annually, with 1,000 individuals committed to contributing $1,000 or more per year by the year 2005 and fostering alliances among university, community and business leaders.

The guidance and influence of individuals participating in President's Cabinet is helping UHCL reach new heights of success, and we appreciate their support in enriching and enhancing the university community.

A gift to UHCL is an investment in the future. Gifts to the university can make an immediate and dramatic impact on critical areas of need or provide long-term resources for specific programs. Contributions may also provide financial support for scholarships or assist with emerging opportunities. Each gift reflects the donor's personal goals, values and interests.

The contributors listed at right and on the following pages represent the depth of commitment to UHCL from alumni, community members, corporations, foundations, students, faculty, staff and friends of the university. Although the goals, values and interests of these donors may vary, the outcome of their generous gifts remains the same — providing valuable resources for today and beyond. For information on supporting UHCL, contact the Office of University Advancement at 281-283-2021 or gifts@cl.uh.edu.

UHCL shapes minds through partnerships with local school districts and community colleges. Under the guidance of Dennis Souck (c), dean of the School of Education, and Sylvia Ramos (l), president of Houston Community College-Southeast, initiatives such as the Success Through Education Program, give Sylvia Balboa (r) and other students a jump start on their teaching careers through classroom experience, mentoring and scholarship opportunities.

focus on the fundamentals

UHCL relies on private contributions to advance its mission of excellence in higher education. Private philanthropy ensures scholarships are available for deserving students and academic programs are enhanced or refined to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

Endowments are one of the best avenues to achieve these objectives. Because the corpus is preserved, and a portion of the interest reinvested, endowment funds provide a permanent source of financial support for pressing needs and emerging opportunities.

A strong endowment base is a powerful tool for student recruitment and retention, as well as an influential factor in the caliber of faculty attracted to UHCL. Endowments also provide financial support to further research goals and enhance the quality of teaching and instruction.

Nineteen new endowments were established in 2000, increasing UHCL's total endowment to $6.2 million. Approximately 200 students benefited from scholarship endowment awards made possible through private contributions. Despite this significant accomplishment, more than 600 students were denied scholarships due to lack of funding. Continued private donations will help narrow this gap.

For information about contributing to or establishing an endowment, contact the UHCL Office of University Advancement at 281-283-2021 or gifts@cl.uh.edu.

*New endowments established in 2000.

UHCL endowments provide windows of opportunity to deserving students as they advance their academic and professional careers. Organizations such as the Association of Business and Professional Women (ABPW), represented by Margaret Sucre-Vail (l), past president of ABPW, as well as individuals like Frank Matthews (r), UHCL associate professor of mathematics, offer generous support through a wide range of scholarship programs.

new directions

"Discovering Opportunities" at UHCL leads to opening doors for scholarship, innovative teaching, cutting-edge research and community service. A 30-month, $3 million campaign, "Discovering Opportunities" will help ensure the university's continued growth.

Through the generosity of Houston Endowment Inc., all gifts designated to UHCL endowments, new or existing, will be matched dollar-for-dollar until March 2003 or $1.5 million in matching funds is allocated, whichever comes first, for a total gift value of $3 million. Employer-matched gifts designated for endowment may also be matched dollar-for-dollar, significantly increasing the impact of the original gift. All donations are tax deductible as allowed by law.

There are a number of different ways to link the name of a loved one, mentor or friend permanently with the university and its goals through endowments benefiting faculty development, chairs, fellowships, lectureships, professorships, program development, research development and scholarships.

We invite you to participate in the "Discovering Opportunities" campaign. Working together, we can create and sustain an environment of continuous renewal that fosters the development of intellect, creativity and character for all. For more information, contact the Office of University Advancement at 281-283-2021 or gifts@cl.uh.edu

Discovering Opportunities
University of Houston ■ Clear Lake

Key university benefactors set the standard for support through their generosity. UHCL's programs received a tremendous boost in 2000 from Houston Endowment Inc. in the form of a $1.5 million challenge grant, the most significant endowment gift in the university's 26-year history. Alumna Sheryl L. Johns, vice president and CFO of Houston Endowment, and students Nicholas Crafts (l) and Margareta Wong (r) discover new opportunities through endowments.

Gifts to the university play a crucial role in strengthening UHCL's foundation by enhancing existing programs and implementing new initiatives. Graduates, parents and friends will find a vibrant panorama of giving opportunities that span numerous interests and options ranging from cash and credit cards to marketable securities and real estate.

For many individuals, an outright gift such as cash may not be the best way of achieving estate-planning goals. Well-considered and planned gifts may offer significant estate and income tax benefits as well as allow the donor to make a larger impact than might otherwise be possible. Planned giving opportunities include gift annuities, pooled income fund gifts, charitable remainder trusts and charitable lead trusts just to name a few.

The Annual Fund sustains day-to-day excellence, making a difference in every aspect of campus life. Contributions to the Annual Fund enable small donations to have the greatest impact on the school, program or scholarship of choice. The Annual Fund supports each of the four schools and garners vital support for specific areas that are in the greatest need.

Gifts-In-Kind are non-monetary items of personal property such as equipment, books, art, food, and professional or personal services that benefit the university. Items may be designated for specific programs, departments, schools or events. Contact the Office of University Advancement at 281-283-2021 or gifts@cl.uh.edu for details.

Matching Gift Companies

Many companies, like those listed below, encourage their employees and retirees to participate in philanthropic opportunities through matching gift programs. These programs may double or even triple the impact of an original gift. Contact your human resources/personnel department for your company's specific matching gift form and information.

alumni association

The UHCL Alumni Association was established to promote the interests of the university and maintain close bonds between UHCL and its 30,500 alumni. Through the generosity of alumni and friends, the association provides programs and services to students, alumni and community members, as well as vital support to the academic community. As membership continues to increase, so do benefits such as travel opportunities, career series seminars, e-Connections newsletter mailings and networking events.

2000 proved to be a banner year for the association. For example, through the Alumni Association Scholarship Endowment, 18 deserving students received financial assistance. Endowment funds surpassed the association's goal of $500,000, meaning that available scholarship dollars continue to grow, benefiting more students each year. The newly formed Alumni Association Program Development Endowment provides crucial funding to faculty for special programs, supplies or other critical needs.

An innovative mentoring program pairs scholarship recipients with alumni who actively serve as tutors and positive role models. Alumni members also work closely with Student Government Association leaders through the annual Back to School Bash held in September.

The new membership structure gives corporation, university staff and community friends an opportunity to become alumni members. Membership dues provide critical funding for the scholarship and program endowments. Membership levels include:

Student Membership	$25
Alumni Membership	$35
Community Membership	$25
†Corporate Membership	$750
†Lifetime Membership	$500

The UHCL experience extends beyond commencement. The university boasts more than 30,000 alumni who are able to maintain links to the university through the UHCL Alumni Association. Diane Vest (c), alumni association president for 2001, is one of several volunteers who support alumni scholarship recipients such as Mohammad Sadiq (l) and Dorothy Kimble (r) through an innovative mentoring program that follows students through graduation.

The university's Development and Advisory Council consists of forward-thinking business and industry leaders who serve as the principal advisory board to the university president. With its collective sight fixed firmly on the future, the council helps chart a course to ensure UHCL's continued success. Council members assist with fund-raising efforts and develop resources to meet university priorities. In addition, they serve as university advocates, interacting with a wide array of constituencies, which influence and impact UHCL. Through the outreach efforts of the council, the university maintains a heightened visibility within the region and beyond.

UHCL's Development and Advisory Council lends an external perspective as the university sets its course for the future. D&A Council Chair Dan Martin (l), Chair-elect Bill Chen (c) and other D&A members serve as advocates for the university and as liaisons with legislators such as state Rep. John Davis (r), a UHCL alumnus, to ensure the university's voice is heard on local, state and national levels.

spectrum of support

UHCL Volunteer Partners add priceless value to the university through their extraordinary gifts of talent and time. Volunteers — students, alumni, staff and community members — support the university in achieving its goals, receiving only intangible compensation in return for their efforts. Volunteers touch every aspect of UHCL's community, as well as the greater community. They serve on advisory boards for schools and programs, assist with alumni activities, serve as student government leaders and help with recruitment efforts. Many of UHCL's volunteers share their professional talents and leadership skills through service in areas such as teaching, healthcare, science and the humanities.

More than 1,100 volunteers were honored at the Volunteer Partner Recognition Reception in September for supporting the university during the 1999-2000 academic year. From this diverse group, five volunteers were tapped as UHCL Outstanding Volunteers of the Year and honored at a National Philanthropy Day celebration in November. A volunteer for each of the following areas was selected: Academic, Administration, Alumni, Student Government and Student Services. The university salutes its volunteers for all they do and for serving as such wonderful ambassadors.
